Candlelight Vigil Unites Concerned RNs, Patients, Activists, and Legislators

There was a remarkable turnout at the MNA's February 25th candlelight vigil for safe patient care, an event that was meant to serve as a reminder to the state legislature of the importance of The Patient Safety Act (S.1206/H.1958).

Nurses from every corner of the state and from all walks of MNA life participated in the evening event, and each carried with them a glowing candle that united them in their belief that every hospital patient deserves the best nursing care possible and that The Patient Safety Act is the best way to guarantee that level of care.

The Patient Safety Act (S.1206/H.1958), filed again in the current legislative session, would require variable, evidence-based patient limits for nurses in all hospital units. In 2014, legislation was signed into law mandating safe limits for intensive care unit patients. This bill will expand on those ICU limits and dramatically improve patient safety by setting a safe limit on the number of patients assigned to a nurse at one time, while providing the flexibility to adjust staffing based on patients' needs.

MNA president Donna Kelly-Williams was on hand to lead the evening's events and shared with the crowd her thoughtful remarks on the matter: "As nurses, we take seriously our duty to protect people at their most vulnerable. Patients who need around-the-clock bedside care from registered nurses often cannot speak for themselves. This vigil is their voice. Nurses know from experience that limiting the number of patients a nurse cares for at one time improves outcomes, and decades of research prove it."

"Every patient deserves safe and essential care," Kelly-Williams said. "Nurses fight for this every day. While the hospital industry lobbies for its own self-interest and profits, nurses stand before the halls of power and demand patient safety for all. Every day that goes by without a law in place means more preventable medical errors, more avoidable complications, increased lengths of stay and more readmissions. In some cases, it is the difference between life and death."

Several elected leaders attended the event and addressed the crowd, including Senator Marc Pacheco and Representative Denise Garlic, both of whom are lead sponsors of The Patient Safety Act, Senator Michael Brady, Senator Anne Gobi, and Representative Sean Garballey. ■

Tobey Nurses Win Big at NLRB!

After a year-long struggle that had nurses at Tobey Hospital in Wareham fighting for their wages, holidays, and retirement contributions, the National Labor Relations Board recently released a decision that found the nurses' employer, Southcoast Hospitals Group, violated the National Labor Relations Act during recent contract talks with MNA nurses.

Specifically, the administrative law judge overseeing the nurses' case found that during negotiations the hospital 1) failed to provide the MNA with requested information relevant to negotiations; 2) introduced an untimely and regressive wage proposal in violation of the parties' ground rules; and 3) unilaterally implemented its bargaining proposal "in the absence of a valid bargaining impasse."

The 142 RNs working at Tobey had been negotiating a successor contract with management for six months when, on April 1, 2015, management prematurely declared impasse and unilaterally implemented its last contract proposal. That proposal, which was a new and regressive proposal pertaining to a wage freeze, was submitted on March 9, 2015 in violation of an existing ground rule stating that no new proposals could be submitted after Dec. 7, 2104.

These illegal decisions by management resulted in lost wages, lost holiday time, and lost 401k contributions for the Tobey RNs. It also meant that the nurses were unable to continue negotiating their successor contract with management, leaving important issues such as scheduling, layoffs, and successorship standards to languish for months.

In response, on April 16, 2015 the nurses filed an unfair labor practice charge against Southcoast Hospitals Group with the NLRB. On July 31 of 2015 the Board's general counsel, in support of the nurses, issued a complaint against Southcoast saying that the hospital group had in fact violated the National Labor Relations Act. But on August 12, 2015 the hospital filed a response with the NLRB denying the complaint.

The case then went to trial and was heard by an NLRB administrative law judge in Providence, RI during the weeks of Oct. 27 – 29 and Nov. 18 – 19, 2015, at which point extensive evidence was presented by the MNA and numerous RNs and union leaders took to the witness stand.

In early March, just three months after the trial, the NLRB ruled entirely in favor of the Tobey Hospital nurses. Said David I. Goldman, the administrative law judge who heard the case, "I find that the hospital's failure to provide the requested benefits information violated the Act ... [and] I find that a valid bargaining impasse did not exist when the hospital declared impasse and unilaterally implemented its proposals. The implementation violated the Act."

"Getting this decision from the NLRB was completely empowering and uplifting," said Maddie Jezierski, RN and chairperson of the MNA bargaining unit at Tobey. "We knew a year ago that management had violated the National Labor Relations Act and that they were bargaining with us in bad faith. That is why we filed the unfair labor practice charge, and that is why, as a group, we stayed committed to following this process through to the end."

"It has been a long road," added Jezierski, "but this decision has made it all worthwhile."

Next Steps

Southcoast Hospitals Groups now has 28 days to either appeal the NLRB decision or to begin implementing all of the remedies outlined in the judge's decision. Remedies include:

- Furnishing the union with any and all information it previously requested
- Rescinding the changes that were implemented as part of its "final offer" on March 9, 2015
- Compensating RNs for any adverse tax consequences associated with repayment of lost earnings (lump-sum payments, etc.)
- Disseminating several copies of an NLRB-issued notice detailing Southcoast's violations, including public postings inside the hospital and emails/mailings to all affected RNs

"It's time for management to make our nurses whole," said Jezierski, "and it also time to get back to the bargaining table." ■

Who's at the Table?

Key Issues in the MNA's Current Contract Talks

Region 1

- Baystate Noble Hospital: Safe patient limits/floating; wages; health insurance.
- Baystate Visiting Nurse Association & Hospice: Wages; health insurance; professional development/training.

Region 2

- Athol: Working towards settling their first contract.

Region 3

- Brockton Hospital: Wages; vacation; breaks; security/safety.
- Cape Cod Healthcare: Just agreed to a one-year contract extension; 1 percent across-the-board with no takeaways.

Region 4

- Northeast Hospital Corporation: Guarantee of one-week summer vacation for all; health insurance premiums; winning language that allows charge nurses to practice without a patient assignment.
- Lawrence General Hospital: At the table since September of 2015. Key issues include staffing, including ancillary and charge nurse with no patient assignment; health insurance co-pays/deductibles/ out-of-pocket costs in a tiered coverage system; modifications to the PTO program, including increasing weekly allowable PTO amounts in all units.

- North Shore Medical Center: Winning language that allows charge nurses to practice without a patient assignment; wages; preventing multiple floats per shift. Informational picket recently held (see pages 6-7 for details).

Region 5

- Boston Medical Center: Closure of East Newton Campus and relocation of MNA nurses to Menino Campus where they would be represented by SEIU (with no guarantee of job security); proposed elimination of extended sick leave; proposed wage cuts via the introduction of half-steps to the scale.
- Boston VNA: Proposed cuts to retirement contributions; proposed tiered wage increases with no increase for nurses at top of scale; management's refusal to address workload issues.
- Brigham and Women's: Safety and security; employer's efforts to create two-tiered systems for health insurance and time off; wages.
- Cambridge Health Alliance: Protection of language on work hours; retroactivity; fair and equitable across-the-board wage increase.
- Newton Wellesley Hospital: Winning language that allows charge nurses to practice without a patient assignment; wages; creation of a new STAT nurse position. Informational picket recently held, and successful strike authorization vote taken (see pages 6-7 for details). ■

Nurses Offer Powerful Testimony at Hearing on MNA's Workplace Violence Prevention Bill

For years, violence against nurses and other health care professionals has been rising. According to one recent survey of the more than 220 union and non-union, 83 percent said they feared or anticipated violence or abusive events on the job in the past two years. Nearly 50 percent have been punched, spit on, groped, kicked or otherwise assaulted or abused. Yet only 19 percent of nurses say their employer was supportive and tried to find solutions after they experienced violence.

The MNA has long been at the forefront of trying to change these statistics and trends, and it has done so by advocating for legislation that will protect nurses and health care professionals from on-the-job violence. Most recently, the MNA filed "An Act Requiring Health Care Employers to Develop and Implement Programs to Prevent Workplace Violence" (S.1313/H.1687), a bill that, if passed, will:

- Require health care employers to perform annual risk assessments in cooperation with employees to identify factors which may put employees at risk for workplace violence
- Require hospitals to look at factors like working hours, public access to the area, working in high-crime areas, staffing levels and other factors that affect safety
- Require hospitals to then develop a written violence prevention plan and put measures in place to minimize risks
- Requires the creation of an in-house crisis response team to support victims of workplace violence

The bill recently progressed further through the legislative process and was heard by the state's Joint Committee on Public Safety and Homeland Security on Feb. 4, 2016.

Frontline nurses and other experts testified in favor of the bill, including Karen Coughlin, vice president of Massachusetts Nurses Association and RN with Department of Mental Health at Taunton State Hospital; Kathy Metzger, RN, retired Brockton Hospital nurse, and MNA board of directors; Patricia Powers, OR nurse and MNA chair at Brigham and Women's Hospital; Daniel Linskey, former Boston Police Chief, managing director at international security firm Kroll; Ellen Farley, RN at Taunton State Hospital and a victim of workplace violence.

"A hospital should be a place where patients go to heal and nurses and other health care professionals are able to provide care in a safe environment," said MNA Vice President Karen Coughlin, a registered nurse with the Department of Mental Health at Taunton State Hospital and a victim of workplace violence. "Unfortunately, hospitals are growing increasingly violent for both employees and patients. This bill will take steps toward making hospitals safer."

Frontline nurses and a former Boston Police Chief spoke to the need for a legislative remedy before members of the Joint Committee on Public Safety and Homeland Security during a hearing on Thursday, Feb. 4 at 10 a.m. ■

Hundreds of Nurses and Supporters Crowd Picket Lines at Newton-Wellesley and North Shore Medical Center

The nurses of Newton-Wellesley Hospital and North Shore Medical Center took the extraordinary step of conducting joint informational picketing outside their respective facilities on March 9 to protest the failure of Partners HealthCare to provide the best possible patient care and working conditions while dishing out exorbitant salary hikes to top executives.

"Partners HealthCare is a non-profit organization that has generated nearly $2 billion in profits over the last five years," said Laurie Andersen, a registered nurse in the emergency department at NWH and co-chair of the MNA/NNU Local Bargaining Unit. "For Partners to make that kind of money and yet refuse to invest in meaningful improvements to patient care and nurse staffing conditions at two of its acute care hospitals is disrespectful to the communities Partners serves and insulting to the nurses it employs."

Nurses at both NWH and NSMC have been bargaining over new contracts since September 2015. The nearly 1,000 nurses at NWH conducted a strike authorization vote on March 9, which was approved by 90% of the bargaining unit. They joined approximately 600 nurses at NSMC in their frustrations over months of unsuccessfully bargaining with Partners over nurse proposals to improve patient care, working conditions, and nurse wages.

"Throughout North Shore Medical Center, nurses have expressed frustration that Partners continues to place its desire for profits ahead of its concern for patients and those who care for them," said Kathy Schevis, a registered nurse at NSMC and co-chair of the MNA/NNU Local Bargaining Unit at the hospital. "The public rightfully wants nurses at the bedside 24 hours a day, caring for people at their most vulnerable. Yet hospital management disregards nurse proposals that would ensure safe and consistent patient care."

Both NWH and NSMC have patient care proposals that Partners refuses to agree to, including:

- Staff nurses in the role of charge nurse should not have a patient assignment. A "charge nurse" is responsible for all patients and nurses in their area. If she has a patient assignment, she is not able to effectively assist other nurses and the needs of the unit. This nurse should be helping with the flow of patients, be on hand to assist less experienced nurses with more complex cases, while also picking up patient assignments when staff become overburdened.

For years, both NWH and NSMC have been affiliated with Partners HealthCare. The Partners system is the most profitable health care employer in the state, posting profits in 2014 alone of more than $120 million, with revenues in excess of $10.9 billion, according to state tax filings. From 2010 to 2014, Partners made more than $1.9 billion in profit.

"Despite repeated attempts to reach agreement on a reasonable wage increase for NWH nurses, Partners HealthCare refuses to loosen its grip on its enormous profits," Andersen said. "We are forced to take to the streets, to bring public attention to Partners' greed. We are seeking a wage increase that barely accounts for inflation. Partners routinely provides its executives double-digit raises."

The parties at NWH began their talks on Sept. 2, 2015 and to date have held 12 negotiation sessions. The contract had an expiration date of September 30, 2015. A federal mediator is expected to schedule the next session between the parties at NWH.

Negotiations at NSMC got started on Sept. 23, 2015 with 7 sessions being held to date. The contract expired on September 30, 2015. ■

Strike Authorization Unfolds at Newton-Wellesley Picket

In addition to picketing on March 9, the Newton-Wellesley RNs also held a strike authorization vote — a vote that was overwhelming approved by 99 percent of those who visited the ballot box.

The authorization is for a one-day strike, but it does not mean the nurses will strike immediately. It gives the 15-member MNA negotiating committee the authorization to call a one-day strike if and when they feel it is necessary.

"No nurse wants to strike, but we have no other option as Partners' management refuses to consider our proposals that would improve patient care and provide nurses with reasonable wage increases," said Laurie Andersen, co-chair of the bargaining unit.

"Partners makes enormous profits," added Nancy Anderson, also a bargaining unit co-chair, "and they do so on the backs of the nurses who work so hard to make this hospital a success. We have been trying to convince the hospital to be fair to us and to our patients. Now, with the strike authorization vote in place, we will have the ability to appeal directly to the public for their support in ensuring Partners puts patients before profits." ■

Safe Patient Handling Bill Gets Favorable Vote from Public Health Committee

In early March, the Joint Committee on Public Health voted to give H.4039, An Act Relative to Safe Patient Handling in Certain Health Facilities, a favorable report advancing efforts to prevent thousands of debilitating injuries suffered by nurses and other health care workers caused by inadequate practices and equipment for moving patients in hospitals and nursing homes. The legislation was filed by Senate Majority Leader Harriette L. Chandler (D-Worcester) and Representative Claire D. Cronin (D-Easton).

As health care workers in Massachusetts move patients, each lifting 1.8 tons during an average shift, they are injured at precipitous rates. According the U.S Bureau of Labor Statistics health care workers are injured on the job more than those in any other profession. In Massachusetts, they are twice as likely to be injured as those in other industries and suffer from patient handling injuries at a rate 70 percent higher than those in other states. In 2010 alone, an estimated 1,000 Massachusetts health care workers suffered patient handling injuries so severe that they resulted in 59 years of missed days of work, according to the DPH report.

Solutions have been proposed by both a state task force and the Massachusetts Nurses Association, and yet the hospital industry refuses to take action. In fact, as documented in an alarming report by WGBH News, the Massachusetts Hospital Association actively worked to suppress a Department of Public Health report detailing SPH recommendations for more than a year.

WGBH reported last February that Laura Punnett, a professor at the University of Massachusetts Lowell's Department of Work Environment, raised concerns about how a report by the Massachusetts Hospital Ergonomics Task Force was dealt with after being submitted to DPH. Punnett, a member of the task force, said the report was given to DPH in 2013, but remained unpublished until December 2014, as the MHA conveyed concerns about "the implications of these recommendations."

Hospitals incur significant direct and indirect costs due to these injuries, but comprehensive SPH programs that use equipment to minimize or eliminate the manual handling of patients are successful at reducing both injuries and cost, according to the report. Facilities that implement SPH programs recoup their initial financial investment within 1 to 4 years.

Yet most Massachusetts health care facilities have done little or nothing to address this problem. Only 44 percent (37) of the 88 hospitals surveyed by the task force reported having a written SPH program in place. The report also showed that policies varied from hospital to hospital.

The reluctance of hospitals to act on their own makes it clear Massachusetts needs a legislative remedy to this problem, according to Beth Piknick, a past president of the Massachusetts Nurses Association who has been advocating for safe patient handling improvements since a career-derailing injury 25 years ago.

"Implementing these policies and using this equipment will save millions of dollars and many thousands of lost work days for workers injured from unsafe patient handling practices," said Piknick, a Cape Cod Hospital RN. "The DPH report specifies a number of steps that hospitals should take to ensure the safety of workers. As is shown in the DPH report, the industry has failed to address this issue, and many employers voice reluctance to address the problem without strong regulation."

The measure approved by the Public Health Committee includes components that match virtually every SPH recommendation made by the DPH task force.

"Here in Massachusetts we're used to being a leader in health care, not an outlier," said MA Senate Majority Leader Harriette L. Chandler. "The lack of appropriate safe patient handling protocols is sidelining health care workers, increasing costs and putting patients in jeopardy. Implementing safe patient handling practices will reduce work related injuries, decrease unsafe handling variability across health care facilities, create standards for measuring outcomes and protect patients. I am very pleased that the Public Health Committee has reported this bill out of committee favorably as we take another step towards protecting our health care workforce."

The bill now moves to the Joint Committee on Health Care Finance. ■

Boston Med Flight Ratifies its Second Contract

The MNA bargaining unit at Boston Med Flight recently ratified its second contract on March 2 by overwhelming margins. The two-year agreement was reached after 12 negotiation sessions, two of which were held with a federal mediator. Highlights include:

- Language that limits management's ability to change the health and dental insurance programs. In the future, any changes in plans must provide for "substantially comparable language."
- The creation of an HRA plan to fund 100 percent of the cost of health plan deductibles for the life of the contract.

- Overtime will be paid to all employees at time and a half for hours worked over 12 in a day. Double time will be paid to all employees who work more than 14 hours a day. Only straight time was paid before.

8:15 – 8:30 a.m. Welcome & Opening Remarks

8:30 a.m. – 10 a.m. Keynote Address

Our National Dinner Table: How the US Food Supply is Affecting our Health

Robyn O'Brien

The US food industry has been adding chemicals and genetically modifying our food for the past 20 years. During that time we have seen a rapid growth in the number of individuals with food allergies, ADHD, autism, diabetes, heart disease and Alzheimer's disease. Because 70% of our immune system is found in our digestive tracts, the foods that we eat and the chemicals that they contain can have a significant impact on our health.

10 – 10:30 a.m. Break

10:30 a.m. – 12 p.m. Concurrent Sessions:

Places in the Heart: The A, B, C's of Cardiac Medications

Carol Daddio Pierce, RN, MS, CCRN

This session will take a physiologic approach to understanding cardiac medications commonly utilized in managing patients with cardiovascular disease. Specific pharmacologic agents to be reviewed include: Antiarrhythmics, ACE inhibitors, Angiotension receptor blockers, Beta blockers and Calcium channel blockers. Implications for administering and evaluating the effectiveness of these medications will also be highlighted.

Steps and Missteps in Germline Cancer Genetics

Huma Q. Rana, MD

This program will discuss the rapidly evolving field of genetic testing for inherited cancer risks. Case studies will be utilized to review the benefits as well as the potential pitfalls of expanded testing options.

Protecting Developing Brains: What Health Care Providers Need to Know about Sport-Related Concussion

Alex M. Taylor, PsyD

Brain injury is a major public health concern among children and adolescents. Although the majority of injuries are considered mild, a proportion will experience considerable physical, cognitive, educational, and social and emotional consequences. In this session, we will focus on the diagnosis and management of head injury. Given its prevalence, the major focus of this presentation will be sport-related concussion.

Cancer Survivorship Care: What Nurses Need to Know

Rich Boyajian, NP

Cancer patients often survive long-term, yet face individualized challenges and health risks in later years. This session will increase the nurse's understanding of the unique needs of the cancer survivor population, provide current national and local resources to guide the care of this population and identify aspects of cancer survivorship care applicable to varied areas of nursing practice.

12 – 1:15 p.m. Lunch

Considering Returning to School for a BSN or MSN? Visit our vendor booths and attend an optional lunch break program on "Returning to School—Online"

1:15 – 2:45 p.m. Concurrent Sessions:

ADHD: Diagnosis and Treatment

Clare O'Callaghan, R.N., C.S., Ed.D.

Psychiatric Competencies for the Non-Psychiatric Nurse

Martha Carville Patch, DNP, PMHNP-BC, CCM

In this session the five most common types of disorders seen in the general hospital will be discussed: thought disorder, personality disorder, affective disorder, substance abuse disorder and dementia. Through the use of case studies, participants will learn effective ways to assess and manage symptoms. Common psychopharmacology treatments for these disorders will be discussed.

Effective Bedside Interaction with Alzheimer's (and other dementia) Patients in an Acute Care Setting

Lori E. Azzara, PsyD

In this session, valuable and practical techniques for use with dementia patients, including ways to effectively communicate, best manage the dementia patient's fears and confusion, guide ADL's, provide a safe and comfortable environment, and manage difficult behaviors (changed sleep patterns, wandering, calling out, etc.) will be discussed.
