Brigham and Women’s Hospital and Partners HealthCare have pledged “to ensure the delivery of the best care to our patients” if the hospital fails to offer a fair contract and 3,300 Brigham nurses hold a one-day strike on June 27. The hospital has said they plan to lock out nurses for four days after the strike and hire nurses from U.S. Nursing Corp., a travel agency based in Colorado. This is very concerning to Brigham nurses, who are highly specialized experts in the care they provide.

“Hospitals functioning during nurses’ strikes do so at a lower quality of patient care... Hiring replacement workers apparently does not help: hospitals that hired replacement workers performed no better during strikes than those that did not hire substitute employees. In each case, patients with conditions that required intensive nursing were more likely to fare worse in the presence of nurses’ strikes.”¹

Replacement nurse’s error: supplement in wrong tube

The cancer patient who died because of a medical error at Oakland’s Alta Bates Summit Medical Center was killed by a nutritional supplement that a replacement nurse mistakenly put into a catheter meant for delivering medicine to her bloodstream, The Chronicle has learned.

.... The woman was one of about 500 replacement nurses brought in by Sutter Health to staff its Oakland hospital and two Berkeley campuses when the California Nurses Association called a one-day strike for Thursday. Sutter kept its replacements for five days, locking out its regular nurses until today.³
